

Telemarketing is a nuisance and an invasion of my privacy. For years I have been repeatedly called by the same companies pushing products or services. I had to screen all of my calls so I would not have to be faced with dealing with another pushy telemarketer. Without the existense of laws to protect consumers from this type of invasion, there is nothing stopping telemarketers from calling consumers day and night. I could easily recieve 2-4 calls a night from telemarketers before I put myself on the "No call" list. Consider the fact that if the public wants to purchase a product, they will do their own research on what is best for them. We don't need telemarketers pushing products and services that THEY think is best for us. Thank you.
